

MAINE VOTING TODAY ON NATIONAL ADMINISTRATION

Heavy Vote Expected, But How Progressives Will Divide is Uncertain.

PORTLAND, Maine, Sept. 11.—Voters of Maine went to the polls today to elect a governor, two United States senators, four representatives to congress, a state legislature, and state auditor.

National issues have been brought to the fore and party leaders brought hundreds of speakers into the state including former Justice Hughes, former Vice President Fairbanks and members of President Wilson's cabinet, to persuade the voters to line up with or against the national executive and the majority in congress.

Maine Normally Republican. Maine, however, is normally republican and the democratic leaders insisted that something more than a scant republican victory will be required to constitute repudiation of the administration while a democratic plurality would be accepted by them as an endorsement.

Progressive Vote Uncertain. In 1914 the progressives cast 18,226 votes for governor. How their vote would split today was a matter of dispute.

Both sides claim they will receive sufficient progressive support to carry the election.

Revelations Of a Wife

Being the Confessions of an Average Married Woman.
By Adele Garrison.

I HAD had experience enough with my mother-in-law to realize that the unpacking of her trunk—which because of her sudden illness—had been undisturbed since her arrival—was to be a solemn ceremonial. Her manner in designating me as her assistant in the process was that of a queen commanding the office of mistress of the robes upon some lucky feminine subject.

That the unpacking and arranging of her things would take all of the next day I was certain. How to get our "old" I did not know. For my interview with Lillian Underwood, which my mother-in-law must not guest, and the preparation for the history class which I was to lead must both be attended to in the same hours that she had planned for her unpacking.

"What is this I hear?" said a soft, gentle voice behind me. I gave a slight start as she caught my eye. In her hand was an almost imperceptible package that told me she would find a way out for me.

"Margaret will do the unpacking for me," my mother-in-law responded a trifle tartly.

"Do not think you realize how near exhaustion your daughter-in-law is," Miss Sonnot replied. "She must get away from the house tomorrow and the next day as much as possible, or I shall have another patient on my hands. If there is anything that absolutely must be taken from your trunk I am a most excellent ladies' maid, and the rest can wait until you are stronger and your daughter-in-law is rested."

"Well, I suppose that will have to do," replied my mother-in-law grudgingly, to my great astonishment. But evidently she did not dare to disobey Miss Sonnot.

I followed the little nurse into the other room.

"What an awful tarradiddle!" I whispered. "I am far from being the exhausted person you picture so vividly."

"A judicious lie is an ever-present help in time of trouble," Miss Sonnot whispered demurely.

"The 'shouter and uglier word' brought my 'Puritan conscience' as Dicky terms it, on the run. I realized that the Margaret Sponder of a year ago would have scorned to deceive an old woman or to allow anyone else to do it for her."

But I seemed wound in such a tangled web of cross-purposes that there was no getting out by using the direct, simple methods which had been my girlhood's way of dealing with problems. So I sent the shattered remnants of my conscience back to their resting place and smiled gratefully at the girl who had so ably rescued me from my dilemma.

As if she had read my thoughts she gave me a friendly little pat on the shoulder. "Don't worry," she said in a low voice. "I'll be able to manage everything for you. Now I must get Mrs. Graham something to eat, and if you wish, you may bathe her face and hands and fix her hair up a bit. The doctor may drop in."

"The doctor?" I echoed in astonishment. "Why I thought she was so much better that he was only making one call a day."

She smiled enigmatically. "When Dr. Pettit gets interested in a case or in people he often makes an extra visit or two for which he makes no charge. It is a little way he has."

As she disappeared in the kitchen and I went slowly back to my mother-in-law's room to perform the little services Miss Sonnot had asked of me, I pondered over the words she had just uttered.

"Interested in a case or in people?" There was an elusive something about her words or gaze especially her voice that puzzled me. All at once I discovered the answer to the problem. Of course Dr. Pettit was in love with Miss Sonnot and was coming to see her!

I was quite excited at the prospect of a romance in my own household, but a sober second thought told me that there had been absolutely no indication of any tenderer feeling than admiration and perhaps friendship on the part of Dr. Pettit for the nurse. Indeed, on one or two occasions he had shown far more solicitude for my fatigue than for hers.

One thing annoyed me. In my haste to relieve Miss Sonnot and give her my room for her nap I had dressed hurriedly with less care than I usually bestow on my personal appearance. I felt that my dress was not as fresh, my hair as carefully done as I should like it to be to meet Dr. Pettit's gaze, critical eyes. I had a suspicion that neatness in a woman was a virtue in his eyes, the lack of it a cardinal sin. Perhaps if I finished my service for my mother-in-law in time, I would have a chance to change my dress and freshen up a bit before the physician's arrival.

SAYS WE BECOME CRANKS ON HOT WATER DRINKING

Hopes every man and woman adopts this splendid morning habit.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried, some have headache, dull and strong, some have really incapacitated by illness?

It is all would practice the drinking of chlorinated hot water before breakfast, what a gratifying change would come over you. Instead of thousands of half sick, anemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, well-checked people everywhere. The reason is that the hot water system does not do itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, the stomach and bowels plumbing like pull down in the house which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the pipes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body poisons. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning before breakfast a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of removing all the stomach, liver, kidney, and bladder impurities, and restoring the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, and stomach, nervous days, and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning limestone water. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost more than a few cents, but it is worth it to keep the system in good order, the morning limestone water and freshening effect upon the system. ### COMMISSION RENEWS SEARCH FOR SOLUTION

Ready to Consider Detailed Plans for the Control of the Mexican Border.

NEW LONDON, Conn. Sept. 11.—The American and Mexican joint commission resumed today its efforts to find a solution for the problems along the Mexican boundary. Luis Cabrera, chairman of the Mexican delegation, presided.

Since their last meeting three days ago the American members have devoted much time to a study of government reports on the various phases of the border problem. They entered the meeting today prepared to go into detailed examination of the various plans for border control that have been suggested.

There has been nothing more than general mention of the Mexican government's request that General Pershing's forces be withdrawn from Mexico.
